DISSESSATION COMPLETION FELLOWSHIPS
Concentration in Religious Practices and Practical Theology
Graduate Division of Religion

Deadline for Spring 2015 application is Dec. 1

Dissertation fellowships of $18,300 are available to concentrators to support the completion of their dissertations.

- Concentrators must submit a written application, including:
  1. An application form and a statement (1000 words) that includes a summary and outline of the dissertation, the current state of the student’s research and progress toward completion, projected timeline, and other sources of funding. This statement must be endorsed by the dissertation director.
  2. Copy of dissertation proposal.
  3. A viable plan for completion of the dissertation during the period of this fellowship.
  4. A letter from the advisor (email is acceptable) affirming the completion plan.

- Concentrators are normally eligible for funding only:
  1. Upon completion of all Concentration requirements, including the core seminar, the leadership requirement, the research experience and analysis requirement, preliminary examinations that include an element of study in religious practices and practical theology, approval of a dissertation proposal that includes an element of study in religious practices and practical theology, and admission to candidacy.
  2. Following the expiration of stipendiary support from the Graduate School (after the 5th year of study).
  3. For two semesters (academic year, or for spring-summer).
  4. If the student has not received another fellowship to cover this period.

- A written statement of progress (250 words) must be submitted by fellowship recipients no later than May 1 of the academic year for which support is granted.
